

Sparking Empowerment through Creativity

Imogene Drummond brings "Divine Sparks" to the San Miguel students in their weekly Art class

Imogene (pictured below with SMAN students) is offering ten Divine Sparks sessions to seventeen fifth graders at San Miguel.

Why is this exciting? Imogene believes there are two reasons: because San Miguel is a visionary school, and because Imogene and San Miguel share the same goal -- to empower young people.

Imogene Drummond is an award-wining filmmaker, painter, futurist, author of articles on cultural transformation, world traveler, and former psychotherapist. Her experience, talent, and vision converge in Divine Sparks. She has an M.F.A. from MICA (the Maryland Institute College of Art)-one of the country's premier art schools, and an M.S.W. from The Catholic University of America. Due to her many painting expeditions around the world, she was invited to join The Society of Woman Geographers.
